DESCRIPTION OF THE VIRTUAL PART OF THE PROGRAM:

The virtual part of the program will be held in May and consist of five lectures lasting two hours each. Through the lectures, participants will learn about the basic methods used in field research of marine ecosystems. All lectures will emphasize the impact of the challenges on the Adriatic Sea and the possibility of applying the acquired knowledge to other marine areas with different ecological conditions that face similar challenges and threats.

After the lectures, the students will take the online exam. Passing the exam is required to attend the program's practical part.

- present the collected and processed data, create conclusions based on them, and present them to a professional audience; - communicate about the ocean in a meaningful way, and make conscious decisions regarding the ocean.

The second part is the field work training in the first week of September 2025 including sample and data collection, laboratory analyses and data interpretation with presentations on the final day. For students, a dormitory is arranged for a price of 140Eur for the duration of the program in September and dinner at UNIZD restaurant for 10Eur per meal. All other costs (such as boat trip to the fish farms and entrance to National parks) are covered by the program.

Further information about the financial contribution is provided to the students that will be selected for this program.
